The Belgian Science Policy Office (BELSPO, www.belspo.be) coordinates major research programmes and provides the Federal Government with all the data needed to make decisions about sustainable development, the effects of climate change, biodiversity, energy, health, mobility and aspects concerning the information society. It is also responsible for federal scientific institutes which, in partnership with other European Union countries, are constantly developing new initiatives by building bridges between high-level research and its promotion among the general public.

It is within this context that the "WONDER" exhibition (www.royalbelspo2018.be), a BELSPO initiative, has been organised as part of the summer event, "Science and Culture at the Royal Palace".

In association with the Chancellery of the Prime Minister, the ten Federal Scientific Institutes, the National Geographic Institute and the War Heritage Institute, BELSPO is offering Belgian and international visitors a unique view of art and science through an amazing insight into artworks or research objects from our federal cultural and scientific heritage.

From diverse backgrounds, our scientists express wonder through their discipline and offer a selection of astonishing scientific instruments, works and brilliant achievements reflecting their research works.

This exhibition gives BELSPO the opportunity to contribute to the popularisation of knowledge and the promotion of federal collections for the pleasure of all.
